

COUNT YOUR BLESSINGS EVERY DAY

If you fail, you have to choose;
To learn your lessons or to loose.
But to lose, is it so bad?
Maybe someday you'll be glad.
That you found another way,
Life is more than just a play.

Count your blessings every day,
Don't you care what others say,
You don't have to be so clever;
Dreams are made of what so ever.

Count your blessings every day,
Don't you care what others say,
Make a home for happiness,
You need less than you can guess.

If he went, so let him go,
He gave just trouble, as you know.
Still you feel he took it all still you feel you are so small.
Look around and dry your tears.
Trust your hopes not your fears.

Count your blessings every day,
Don't you care what others say,
You don't have to be so clever;
Dreams are made of what so ever.

Count your blessings every day,
Don't you care what others say,
Make a home for happiness,
You need less than you can guess.
You need less than you can guess.

Count your blessings every day,
Don't you care what others say,
You don't have to be so clever;
Dreams are made of what so ever.

Count your blessings every day,
Don't you care what others say,
Make a home for happiness,
You need less than you can guess. .
Count your blessings every day,
That is how you make them stay
